Work Experience

You must have a minimum of 18 months of general experience in a fire investigation related industry. General experience is defined as practical experience that would allow an individual to develop fundamental knowledge and abilities related to fire scene investigation without the specific assignment of specialized duties or requirements. The general experience required for this certification can usually be obtained through performance of ancillary duties included in the job responsibilities of fire officers and suppression personnel, insurance adjusters and investigators, law enforcement investigators, crime scene technicians, as well as other professionals directly involved with the investigation and documentation of fire events. Please provide documentation to support your experience such as a letter from your employer or employment records.
